

FP900001 YVES KLEIN ANT 125

Reproduction of the work "Jonathan Swift", (ANT 125) by Yves Klein. This anthropometry is the result of a performance where the body of a model, coated with paint, is applied to the pictorial support. This work bears the name of the man of letters who, in his " Voyage à Laputa ", revealed astronomical discoveries that were not proven as scientific realities until long afterwards. For Yves Klein, art is a quest for reality and the work is the trace of the artist's communication with the world. He also maintains that poetic sensitivity is capable of revealing concrete realities.
